

A salesperson can create zero or many invoices but an invoice can have one and only one salesperson.

A customer can have one or many invoices and an invoice can have one and only one customer on it.

A mechanic may be on zero or many service histories while a service history can have one or many mechanics on it.

A service history can have one or many service tickets, while a service ticket can be attached to one and only one service history.

An invoice can have one and only one car id on it, and a car can be sold on one and only one invoice.

A service history can have one and only one car on it, while a car can have one and only one service history attached to it.

A car can have one or many service tickets while a service ticket can be from one and only one car.

A customer can have zero or many service tickets while a service ticket can have one and only one customer

A mechanic can have zero or many service tickets to work on while a service ticket can have one or many mechanics

An invoice number can have one or many service tickets attached to it while a service ticket can have one and only one invoice.